Excerpt: . . . 11 In terms of Katrina and the impact on Pascagoula, there was ad-verse impact, just like there was for Navy shipbuilding programs as well. We roughly estimate probably a 4-month delay or so in the first and second national security cutter because of that storm. There is impact on equipment in the yard, impact on workforce and so forth, impact on the vessel itself. And probably some increased costs. We know that somewhere between probably 20 million and 80 million additional because of the delay and the problems associated with that hurricane, some of which has already been appropriated in the supplemental and more we are going to have to identify in the fourth supplemental that we are likely to come forward with Katrina. So, yes, there has been impact by Katrina, but the shipyard is back in operation. I was just down there last week walking around that new ship, the Coast Guard cutter, Bertholf. It is about 50 per-cent done. It is going to be a terrific ship. It is going to have vertical UAV capability, helicopter capability, twin stern launch with over-the-horizon small boats. It is going to be a very, very ca-pable platform for our missions. Mr. L. What about the impact of the actual increased use UNGREN of your assets during those two hurricanes I mean, I know you project you are going to use your assets, but those are pretty heavy loads. Admiral C. We build...
