Excerpt: . . . 11 Im happy to see the Postmaster General making the Postal Service more efficient. I think it should be clear to everyone, however, that the kind of cost cutting the Postal Service has engaged in this year cannot be sustained and will not be what makes the Postal Service a fiscally sound entity in the long term. As the economy begins to pick up, the Postal Service may very well see an in-crease in volume as the Postmaster General predicts. At the same time, however, the number of addresses they are required to deliver to will continue to increase. I dont know what effect this years workforce reductions and the continued facilities freeze is having on service right now, but if the Postal Service intends to continue balancing its budget by cutting employees and avoiding new facilities construction, it will probably have some serious difficulties meeting its current delivery stand-ards, and even its universal service mandate. The Postmaster General is probably doing all he can right now to keep the Postal Service afloat. We need real reform of the way the Postal Service does business for him to be able to go any further. Whether it comes from Congress or from a Presi-dential Commission, postal reform is still necessary. I think it should, and can, come from Congress and I hope this Subcommittee will work with General Potter next year on this issue. I look forward to hearing from General...
