Not illustrated. 1851 Excerpt: .are natives of warm climates; but they will nevertheless bear our English winter very well without so much care: they hide themselves in old walls, or burrow underground, like our squirrels and hedgehogs. How very curious this sleepy habit is, mamma! Do you think the animals require such a long rest? No, I do not imagine that can be the reason; because some animals who, in their usual haunts, spend some months thus, when placed in warmer situations, do not sleep except at night. The field-cricket, for instance, hibernates in rural districts; but in the precincts of a country town, migrates, as it were, to the kitchen hearth, and there enlivens us with his cheerful chirp all the winter long. This winter sleep seems, therefore, a merciful provision for those animals who could get no proper food in that rigorous season, or who would die of...
