Neuware - Diploma Thesis from the year 2001 in the subject Business economics - Marketing, Corporate Communication, CRM, Market Research, Social Media, grade: 1,7, University of Bremen (Wirtschafts- und Sozialwissenschaften), language: English, abstract: Inhaltsangabe:Abstract: The retail landscape is changing. The consumer faces a much greater choice of goods and a completely different experience. An extensive range of purchase formats and locations is made available. The High Street is no longer a necessity but an option. According to IDC Research, UK e-commerce transactions in 1999 were worth approximately Pds. 2.8 million. They have the potential to grow tenfold over the next three years. A literature review highlighted the wide level of interest in the potential of the Internet as a commercial opportunity and a new medium within the retail environment. However, past research has seldom included the emergence of online shopping for clothing and the impact on traditional High Street retailers. The aim of this thesis was established on grounds of this gap in findings and the research question was identified: Is it likely that clothing shopping on the Internet will replace traditional High Street shopping In the course of the thesis, primary and secondary research was undertaken. Documentary and multiple source data have been essential in providing me with a background to shopping, the UK Retail Market and Internet retailing. Secondary data has provided the basis of this thesis. It included the analysis of the UK retail market, the analysis of changes in consumer behaviour and an overview over online issues such as Internet usage and the uptake of online clothes shopping. Retailer opinions were examined as well as research reports. Primary research comprised in-depth interviews with 15 students,...
