Houghton Mifflin. 1 Cloth(s), 2014. hard. Book Condition: New. America in World War II faced an enemy in Europe that had banned and burned more than 100 million books. In response, librarians launched a campaign that sent millions of donated hardcover books overseas with our troops, but something more was needed. Here the author of The Myth of Ephraim Tutt recounts how the War Department and the American publishing industry stepped in with an extraordinary program, ultimately producing 120 million small, lightweight paperbacks that could easily be carried in a pocket or pack. These Armed Service Editions helped rescue The Great Gatsby from obscurity, and made Betty Smith, author of A Tree Grows in Brooklyn, into a national icon. Soldiers read the books in chow lines, in foxholes, and in field hospitals; they also wrote to the authors many of whom responded to every letter and returned home to help build a literate middle class. "A thoroughly engaging, enlightening, and often uplifting account of America's counterattack against Nazi Germany's wholesale burning of books . using the written word itself as a powerful reply to tyranny, thought control, absolutism, and perverse ideology. I was enthralled and moved." Tim O'Brien "Well written, carefully researched, and drawing upon primary sources and news articles, this book brings to life a little-known part of World War II culture. Perfect for any bibliophile or historians interested in the stories from the home front." Library Journal "[Molly Guptill] Manning's entertaining account will have readers nostalgic for that seemingly distant era when books were high priority." Publishers Weekly 267.
